

LAUNCH: The new-look Rubb Military website

New web showcase for Rubb Military hangars, sunshades and workshops

Equip yourself with all the latest projects, news, events and social media featured on Rubb UK's new-look military website.

Rubb Web Developer Michael Halpin has been busy transforming the website into an informative and interactive site full of information about Rubb Buildings Ltd's military products, accessories, services, project news, photographs and videos links. You can also interact with the company using social media or contact us using a series of new forms. If you would like us to keep in touch you can subscribe to our new email newsletter here too.

Michael said: "We have introduced a format which mirrors rubb.co.uk but with a military twist. New features include rolling news on the home page, social media updates, a multi-media page, exciting new photographs and a series of enquiry forms which will help our clients request newsletters, brochures, drawings and submit enquiries."

General Manager Ian Hindmoor added: "We hope the new features on the website will help support customers with their enquiries. Our EFASS range of military buildings is second-to-none when it comes to the rapid deployment of military hangars, warehouses and sunshades. We hope our website reflects all of the advantages of such a system and gives visitors all the tools they need to learn all about it."

Notes to Editors

About Rubb Buildings Ltd
